AIM

To enable participants to explore how to empower individuals using health and social care services in order to maximise their independence.

OBJECTIVES

At the end of the seminar, each participant should be able to;

- explain how current legislation and sector skills standards influence organisational policies and practices for promoting and maximising the rights of users of health and social care services
- analyse factors that may affect the achievement of promoting and maximising the rights of users of health and social care services
- analyse how communication between care workers and individuals contribute to promoting and maximising the rights of users of health and social care services.
- analyse factors that may affect the achievement of promoting and maximising the rights of users of health and social care services.
- evaluate the effectiveness of policies and procedures within a health and social care setting for administering medication

TARGET

Leaders, Managers and Policy Implementers and Health and Social Care Practitioners.

CONTENT

- The design and review of services promotes and maximises the rights of users of health and social care services
- How to promote the participation and independence of users of health and social care services
- Understand the responsibility of managing and monitoring risks in health and social care settings
- Understand how good practice in the administration of medicine is essential for users of health and social care services.

DELIVERY FORMAT

- Classroom based lectures plus visits to related health care organisations in the UK to observe existing practice.

FEE

- £3,450.00 per participant, covering tuition, all course materials, refreshments, certificate, all course-related visits and excursions.